

Chapter 9 Section 3 notes

Why did many Americans distrust the idea of political parties?

Many Americans distrusted political parties

- Americans had seen how factions, or opposing groups within parties, worked in Britain. Members of factions were often more interested in personal gain than in public good.
- Political parties could be a threat to national unity. They could lead to "jealousies and false alarms."

How did the views of Hamilton and Jefferson differ?

Issue	Hamilton's Views	Jefferson's Views
Strict or loose interpretation of the Constitution	Preferred a loose interpretation of the Constitution. Believed the Constitution gave Congress the power to make all laws "necessary and proper" to carry out its duties. The Bank of the United States was necessary.	Preferred a strict interpretation. Any power not specifically given to the federal government belonged to the states. The Bank of the United States was unconstitutional , or not permitted by the Constitution.
Britain or France	Wanted close ties with Britain.	Wanted close ties with France.

Issue	Hamilton's Views	Jefferson's Views
Manufacturing or farming	Thought the government should encourage manufacturing and trade. Favored cities and merchants.	Thought farmers were the backbone of the nation. Feared manufacturing would concentrate power in the hands of a few wealthy Americans.
Federal or state power	Federal government should have greater power than state governments. A strong federal government would increase commerce and keep the peace.	A small federal government would protect individual freedom. A strong federal government might take over powers the Constitution gave to the states.

Why did political parties develop?

- Hamilton and Jefferson clashed in private.
- Jefferson and James Madison decided to organize the supporters of their views. They met with leading New York politicians.
- Leaders in other states organized to support either Hamilton or Jefferson. Jefferson's supporters called themselves DemocraticRepublicans. Hamilton's supporters were called Federalists.
- Newspapers began to take sides.
- The two political parties took part in the election of 1796.
