The Utilization of Bioremediation to Reduce Soil Contamination: Problems and Solutions Václav Sasek, John A. Glaser, P. Baveye, 2012-12-06 Traditional reliance on chemical analysis to understand the direction and extent of treatment in a bioremediation process has been found to be inadequate Whereas the goal of bioremediation is toxicity reduction few direct reliable measures of this process are as yet available Another area of intense discussion is the assessment of market forces contributing to the acceptability of bioremediation Finally another important component is a series of lectures and lively exchanges devoted to practical applications of different bioremediation technologies The range of subjects covers a wide spectrum encompassing emerging technologies as well as actual full scale operations Examples discussed include landfarming biopiling composting phytoremediation and mycoremediation Each technology is explored for its utility and capability to provide desired treatment goals Advantages and limitations of each technology are discussed The concept of natural attenuation is also critically evaluated since in some cases where time to remediation is not a significant factor it may be an alternative to active bioremediation operations ASTM Standards on Environmental Sampling American Society for Testing Materials, 1997 A complete reference of American Society for Testing and Materials standards on environmental sampling covering standards for sampling soil water particulate matter and vapors in workplaces wells laboratories and natural areas with guides for safe practices in areas such as construction chemical testing groundwater monitoring and air monitoring at waste management facilities Annotation copyright by Book News Inc Portland OR Microscale Testing in Aquatic Toxicology Peter G.
