

Cellular Respiration

Worksheet

Name KEY
Date

1. What are the 3 phases of the cellular respiration process?

Glycolysis, Krebs Cycle, Electron Transport

2. Where in the cell does the glycolysis part of cellular respiration occur?

in the cytoplasm

3. Where in the cell does the Krebs (Citric Acid) cycle part of cellular respiration occur?

in the mitochondria

4. Where in the cell does the electron transport part of cellular respiration occur?

in the mitochondria

5. How many ATP (net) are made in the glycolysis part of cellular respiration?

2 (net)

6. How many ATP are made in the Krebs cycle part of cellular respiration?

2

7. How many ATP are made in the electron transport part of cellular respiration?

32 - 34

8. In which phase of cellular respiration is carbon dioxide made?

Krebs Cycle

9. In which phase of cellular respiration is water made?

Electron Transport

10. In which phase of cellular respiration is oxygen a substrate?

Electron Transport

11. In which phase of cellular respiration is glucose a substrate?

Glycolysis

12. On average, how many ATP can be made from each NADH during the electron transport process?

3

13. On average, how many ATP can be made from each FADH₂ during the electron transport process?

2

14. What would happen to the cellular respiration process if the enzyme for one step of the process were missing or defective?

The entire process beyond that point could not happen.

15. What happens to the high-energy electrons (and hydrogen) held by NADH if there is no O₂ present? If no oxygen is present, the pyruvic acid must take the electrons (and their hydrogens) back.

16. Explain why this happens.

This happens because there are only a small number of NAD⁺ molecules in the cell. They must be reused to keep glycolysis going with additional glucose molecules. This means they need to "unload" the electrons from NADH by giving them to some other molecule. Since the pyruvic acid cannot continue on to the Krebs cycle when there is no oxygen present, it receives the electrons. This allows the glycolysis portion of cellular respiration to continue even when O₂ is not present. This process of making ATP in the absence of O₂ is called fermentation.

17. What is the overall reaction for fermentation in yeast?

Glucose → 2 Ethyl alcohol + 2 CO₂ + 2 ATP + Heat

18. What is the overall reaction for lactic acid fermentation?

Glucose → 2 Lactic Acid + 2 ATP + Heat

19. Only a small part of the energy released from the glucose molecule during glycolysis is stored in ATP. How is the rest of the energy released? (HINT: It is a product in the overall reaction for cellular respiration.)

It is released as heat.

The Complementary Therapist's Guide to Conventional Medicine E-Book Clare Stephenson, 2011-07-26 The Complementary Therapist s Guide to Conventional Medicine is a unique textbook for students and practitioners of complementary medicine offering a systematic comparative approach to Western and Eastern medicine Practitioners of complementary medicine increasingly find themselves working alongside conventionally trained doctors and nurses and it is vital for them to develop a core understanding of conventional medical language and philosophy The book is designed as a guide to understanding conventional medical diagnoses symptoms and treatments whilst also encouraging the reader to reflect on and translate how these diagnoses may be interpreted from a more holistic medical perspective Throughout the text the practitioner student is encouraged to see that conventional and more holistic interpretations are not necessarily contradictory but instead are simply two different approaches to interpreting the same truth that truth being the patient s symptoms After introductory sections on physiology pathology and pharmacology there follow sections devoted to each of the physiological systems of the body In these the physiology of each system is explored together with the medical investigation symptoms and treatments of the important diseases which might affect that system As each disease is described the reader is encouraged to consider the corresponding Chinese medical perspective The textbook concludes with chapters relating specifically to dealing with patients in practice In particular these focus on warning signs of serious disease supporting patients on medication and ethical issues which may arise from management of patients which is shared with conventional practitioners The book also offers a detailed summary of Red Flag symptoms which are those which should be referred for Western medical investigation or emergency medical treatment and also a guide to how patients can be safely supported in withdrawing from conventional medication when this is clinically appropriate Those wishing to use the text for systematic study can make use of the question and problem solving approach offered on the accompanying CD to which references to self study exercises appear at regular stages throughout the book This means that the text can be easily adapted to form the basis of a study course in clinical medicine for students of complementary medicine In addition to the self testing questions and answers the supporting CD also contains checklists for revision and full colour illustrations

ABOUT THE AUTHOR Clare Stephenson is a qualified medical practitioner who worked in hospital medicine general practice and public health medicine for a number of years before training in Traditional Chinese Medicine TCM and acupuncture Over the course of a decade she developed and taught an undergraduate course for students of Chinese medicine on Western medicine and how it relates to TCM She is particularly committed to encouraging communication and understanding between practitioners of different health disciplines She currently works as a GP in Oxfordshire
