Layne, 2001-07-01 Today's world poses a triple threat to the American population infectious diseases contamination of food and water and bioattacks biowarfare or bioterrorism At least 17 countries are producing weapons of mass destruction using viruses bacteria or their toxins AIDS E coli contamination drug resistant tuberculosis and virulent flu strains are perhaps the best known of a host of disease threats What these dangers have in common is the amount of data required to achieve solutions in some cases as much as a petabit 1 followed by 15 zeros of data is required to study large numbers of samples from widespread locations Firepower in the Lab examines how the nation can combat this triple threat by improving our ability to detect measure and monitor harmful biological agents It explores the potential of today's exciting new laboratory automation and computer technologies as well as the emerging tools of molecular biology how we can generate and analyze more data quickly and reduce human hands on involvement which inevitably introduces errors The book discusses how to improve and apply technologies such as robotics laboratory automation lab on a chip bioinformatics and Internet control innovations It reviews lessons learned from our experience with pandemic flu viruses It also presents strategies for developing new high throughput technologies including how to address the lack of public funding for critical research undertakings
