Clopper, 2001-05 How was it possible for drama especially biblical representations to appear in the Christian West given the church's condemnation of the theatrum of the ancient world In a book with radical implications for the study of medieval literature Lawrence Clopper resolves this perplexing question Drama Play and Game demonstrates that the theatrum repudiated by medieval clerics was not theater as we understand the term today Clopper contends that critics have misrepresented Western stage history because they have assumed that theatrum designates a place where drama is performed While theatrum was thought of as a site of spectacle during the Middle Ages the term was more closely connected with immodest behavior and lurid forms of festive culture Clerics were not opposed to liturgical representations in churches but they strove ardently to suppress May games ludi festivals and liturgical parodies Medieval drama then stemmed from a more vernacular tradition than previously acknowledged one developed by England's laity outside the boundaries of clerical rule The Cambridge Companion to Greek and Roman Theatre Marianne McDonald, Michael Walton, 2007-05-31 This series of essays by prominent academics and practitioners investigates in detail the history of performance in the classical Greek and Roman world Beginning with the earliest examples of dramatic presentation in the epic cycles and reaching through to the latter days of the Roman Empire and beyond this 2007 Companion covers many aspects of these broad presentational societies Dramatic performances that are text based form only one part of cultures where presentation is a major element of all social and political life Individual chapters range across a two thousand year timescale and include specific chapters on acting traditions masks properties playing places festivals religion and drama comedy and society and commodity concluding with the dramatic legacy of myth and the modern media The book addresses the needs of students of drama and classics as well as anyone with an interest in
