

Cyber Bullying Issue

Social Networking has taken bullying to the outrageous. Prior to advanced technology, kids and teenagers were troubled by school bullies. Today, they are focused by bullies by means of internet. The vast majority experience some form of bullying throughout their life. Growing up, I encountered being bullied like typical name calling. I additionally dealt with minor instances of virtual bullies. These bullies are also known as cyber bullies.

Cyber bullying is an abuse of information technology to harass or harm other individuals. It could be through posting negative word or bits of gossip about someone else on the internet or social networking sites with an intention to humiliate him/her in public. With the expanding utilization of internet services and mobile technologies, cyber bullying has turned out to be frequent, particularly among teenagers. It incorporates correspondences that seek to control, criticize, control, harass or erroneously discredit a person.

The actions are frequent, deliberate and hostile intended to tarnish reputation of another person. These actions are performed in social media, public discussions or other online sites. A cyber bully might be an online stranger or it may be a person whom the victim really knows.

Today, most of individuals, especially people between ages of 12 to 18 invest more time spending on social networking sites like Facebook, Twitter and so forth. There are various risks associated with these sites, among which cyber bullying is most normal and widespread. The cyber bully usually posts hostile photographs and videos, deceiving information or expose secrets about objective on these sites to defame him/her.

Cyber bullying activities are so hurtful to the extent that sometimes it compels the victim to end his/her life. There have been various cases that include adolescents committing suicide due to being bullies or humiliated over the internet. Now, we have the Anti-Cyber bullying act or the Republic Act No. 10627 which is an act requiring schools to adapt policies to prevent the acts of bullying in the school that aims to protect the people especially children from being bullied. The utilization of technology to harass or threaten another individual has turned into a worldwide issue.

Cyberbullying has generally affected the young people. Spotting the issues can be simple or difficult relying upon the degree and the technological trend. For instance, social media platfo
