

Overview of component creation

This chapter provides an overview of component design and the process of writing components for desktop applications. The material here assumes that you are familiar with C++ and its associated components.

- Class library
- Components and classes
- Creating components
- What goes into a component?
- Creating a new component
- Creating embedded components
- Creating installed components
- Installing a component on the Component platform

For information on installing user components, see “Installing component packages” on page 35-21 of the Developer’s Guide.

Class library

Apple’s components model is a component library that includes the Thread Component Library (TCL) and the Component Library for Cocoa/Carbon (CLC). Figure 1-1 shows the relationship of selected classes that make up the TCL hierarchy. The CLC hierarchy is similar to the TCL hierarchy, but Windows controls are called widgets (instead of views), controls (instead of widgets), and views (instead of controls). For a more detailed description of these hierarchies and the relationship of hierarchies among them, see Chapter 2, “A brief overview programming the component system.” For an overview of how the hierarchies differ from each other, see “TCL/CLC versus Windows” on page 35-27 of the Developer’s Guide and also for the TCL and CLC reference for details on the components.
