Assessment and Evaluation in Early Childhood

Assessment and evaluation in early childhood are two terms that are often used interchangeably. However, they are not the same. Assessment is the process of gathering information about a child's development, while evaluation is the process of making a judgment about a child's development. Assessment is a continuous process, while evaluation is a one-time event. Assessment is used to identify a child's strengths and weaknesses, while evaluation is used to determine if a child is meeting certain standards. Assessment is used to plan instruction, while evaluation is used to measure the effectiveness of instruction.

The purpose of this document is to provide a comprehensive overview of assessment and evaluation in early childhood. It will discuss the different types of assessment and evaluation, the tools and techniques used, and the role of the teacher in the process.
