DREAM Act

There is always that one student that has a strong work ethic and when things get exacerbated they keep working and just do not quit. These students are students who are eager to learn who want succeed, but when it comes to the end of their high school career, what happens? There are approximately 65,000 young adults that are undocumented and graduate each year from high school ("The DREAM Act Immigration Access to Higher Education. "). These students want to achieve something prominent for themselves they have the grades and the qualifications so that they can attend college. The main obstacle standing in their way is citizenship or residency.

This complication prohibits them from being able to apply for government financial aid. Tuition is not only higher but triples to being in state, so that they can feel assuaged. There are many speculations of why people migrate to this country, whether it is illegal or not. One of the main reasons that they migrate is so they have a better life and so do their children such as being able to have a better education. Although there are many undocumented people in this country, immigration is one of the main reasons that our country's economy is functioning. The DREAM Act not only helps students to go to college and be successful, but it also helps sustain the economy of the United States, but will take several years for the process of the DREAM Act to become a reality.

Education and job opportunities are a few things that entices people to come to the United States. In the United States there are many opportunities to be able to achieve what some consider to be the "American dream." Education is one of the main reasons that many immigrants choose to come to America. Because many kids are brought unwillingly to the United States by their parents, many are then enrolled in schools. Their parents enroll them in school because they know that, that is they way to be able to achieve something higher than what they achieved. All the parents want is something better than what they had; for many that is what the "American dream" is about. On the contrary many people think that illegal immigrants are simply endangering the education of their kids. "As with people from all over the world, many Central Americans move to the United States or Canada so that their children might have a better life. Education opportunities are a major draw. But many financially strapped public schools are overwhelmed by the special needs of students who arrive in their classroom speaking little or no English." (Hernandez, Romel 19).

Many of these students would not be able to attend school in their country because of financial need. In the United States these students have the option to attend public schools and receive a free education and give them a better paying job. "Many of the immigrants, lacking a college education or extensive job skills, have no options except low-wage w

1990s when Ronald Reagan's Republican administration implemented an amnesty program while the state of California adopted the punitive Proposition 187. Paramount in today's immigration debate however are the homeland security concerns rendered acute by the 2001 bombing of the World Trade Center in New York City. The controversial USA PATRIOT Act of 2001 and the Homeland Security Act of 2002 are among the documents surveyed in relation to the contemporary immigration debate.
