

Since Castaneda's figure only seems to exist
you and alone
it's a still life in the air
it's a flower

In this drawing Castaneda shows you how an artist thinks of the figure in terms of simple forms. He used blocks to study the front and side planes and the top and down planes. He then drew a light from the left and from above. Then, if we say only for this to put shade on the side and down planes. If he had drawn perfectly like the figure and put the same light and shade on them, they would have looked very well.

Even in this block-like figure, Castaneda still shows his unswerving training. The line (1) designates the top of the torso.

There is another principle easily observed here. As the artist views his attention from one block-like form to another, he notes the direction of each form. In other words, objects have only to function such as such.
