Chapter 22 Electrostatics Static Charge

1. Consider the diagram below.

- (a) A pair of insulated metal spheres, A and B, touch each other, so in effect they form a single uncharged conductor.
- (b) A positively charged rod is brought near A, but not touching, and electrons in the metal sphere are attracted toward the rod. Charges in the spheres have redistributed and the negative charge is labeled. Draw the appropriate + signs that are repelled to the far side of B.
- (c) Draw the signs of charge when the spheres are separated while the rod is still present, and in
- (d) after the rod has been removed. Your completed work should be similar to Figure 22.7 in the textbook. The spheres have been charged by induction.

types of problems individual differences among problem solvers as well as the domain and context within which a problem is being solved Part one describes six kinds of problems and the methods required to solve them Part two goes beyond traditional discussions of case design and introduces six different purposes or functions of cases the building blocks of problem solving learning environments It also describes methods for constructing cases to support problem solving Part three introduces a number of cognitive skills required for studying cases and solving problems Finally Part four describes several methods for assessing problem solving Key features includes Teaching Focus The book is not merely a review of research It also provides specific research based advice on how to design problem solving learning environments Illustrative Cases A rich array of cases illustrates how to build problem solving learning environments Part two introduces six different functions of cases and also describes the parameters of a case Chapter Integration Key theories and concepts are addressed across chapters and links to other chapters are made explicit The idea is to show how different kinds of problems cases skills and assessments are integrated Author expertise A prolific researcher and writer the author has been researching and publishing books and articles on learning to solve problems for the past fifteen years This book is appropriate for advanced courses in instructional design and technology science education applied cognitive psychology thinking and reasoning and educational psychology Instructional designers especially those involved in designing problem based learning as well as curriculum designers who seek new ways of structuring curriculum will find it an invaluable reference tool

Converging Perspectives on Conceptual Change Tamer G. Amin, Olivia Levrini, 2017-11-13 Conceptual change how conceptual understanding is transformed has been investigated extensively since the 1970s The field has now grown into a multifaceted interdisciplinary effort with strands of research in cognitive and developmental psychology education educational psychology and the learning sciences Converging Perspectives on Conceptual Change brings together an extensive team of expert contributors from around the world and offers a unique examination of how distinct lines of inquiry can complement each other and have converged over time Amin and Levrini adopt a new approach to assembling the diverse research on conceptual change the combination of short position pieces with extended synthesis chapters within each section as well as an overall synthesis chapter at the end of the volume provide a coherent and comprehensive perspective on conceptual change research Arranged over five parts the book covers a number of topics including the nature of concepts and conceptual change representation language and discourse in conceptual change modeling explanation and argumentation in conceptual change metacognition and epistemology in conceptual change identity and conceptual change Throughout this wide ranging volume the editors present researchers and practitioners with a more internally consistent picture of conceptual change by exploring convergence and complementarity across perspectives By mapping features of an emerging paradigm they challenge newcomers and established scholars alike to embrace a more programmatic orientation towards conceptual change

Learner-centered Science Education ,2019-02-11 This book arises from the author s experience of the South African science curriculum development and teaching since 1994 exploring definitions of science and approaches to science education appropriate to a newly liberated developing country Each of the 50 chapters is borne out of Cliff Malcolm s close relationships with communities in SA where he obtained deep insights into their attitudes to science teaching and learning providing him with an empirical basis to challenge tertiary institutions to transform their curriculum offerings to embrace the culture and world views of African students The author makes a compelling case for the evolution of relevant science teaching and learning that provide capital for indigenous knowledges The book has relevance also to first world countries because the social and educational problems facing South Africa though starker here are present in all countries The book addresses among others the nature of scientific knowledge and knowledge production how scientific knowledge can be accessed and represented what counts as legitimate scientific knowledge in the South African context of colonization liberation inequity and African belief systems The book extends the debates on African Science and offers ways of talking and writing about science that reframe it acknowledging problematics and pluralism offering ways of bringing Western and African thought together Using a richly descriptive novelistic style the author sketches vivid portraits of his research sites participants and experiences His vignettes are embedded in deep theoretical insights lending gravity to the development discourse in science education providing a coherent language for the transformational agendas of science educators committed to the project of social justice through a relevant science
