Containing essays by leading Cold War scholars such as Wilfried Loth Geir Lundestad and Seppo Hentil this volume offers a broad ranging examination of the history of d tente in the Cold War The ten years from 1965 to 1975 marked a deep transformation of the bipolar international system of the Cold War The Vietnam War and the Prague Spring showed the limits of the two superpowers who were constrained to embark on a wide ranging d tente policy which culminated with the SALT agreements of 1972 At the same time this very d tente opened new venues for the European countries French policy towards the USSR and the German Ostpolitik being the most evident cases in point For the first time since the 1950s Western Europe began to participate in the shaping of the Cold War The same could not be said of Eastern Europe but ferment began to establish themselves there which would ultimately lead to the astounding changes of 1989 90 the Prague Spring the uprisings in Gdansk in 1970 and generally the rise of the dissident movement That last process being directly linked to the far reaching event which marked the end of that momentous decade the Helsinki conference The Making of D tente will appeal to students of the Cold War international history and European contemporary history Child Abduction within

The language experience of children developing in linguistically diverse environments is subject to considerable variation both in terms of quantity and quality of language exposure It is an open question how to investigate language exposure patterns and more important which factors are relevant for successful language learning For example children acquiring a minority language including a signed language are exposed to less variety of input than children acquiring a more global language This is because they are living in a smaller linguistic community and with fewer occasions to use the language in everyday life Despite this reduced input most native signers are successful language learners In contrast native language competence is not always achieved in signing deaf children with hearing parents or those with cochlear implants learning a spoken language A similar outcome but with very different reasons has also been reported for hearing children with language impairment In these populations acquisition of morphosyntactic aspects is developing atypically ending with an uncomplete linguistic repertoire The circumstances of exposure during language development tend to differ in significant ways with respect to a large number of factors such as i length quality and quantity of input ii social status and attitudes toward the language iii cognitive abilities required for language learning and iv age of first exposure Having early exposure to a range of different speakers is important in the acquisition of any language and may affect language proficiency However negative societal attitudes or a cognitive based disadvantage may create an unfavourable learning environment that prevents language learning from surfacing typically This situation inevitably generates a different type of exposure for the child and consequently different language competence In this Research Topic we intend to encourage the debate on social linguistic and cognitive factors at play for designing an effective environment for language acquisition aiming at integrating linguistic variables coming from theoretical studies on language with environmental variables such as measures of language input or cognitive abilities on functions ancillary to language development      The International English and French Dictionary Leon Smith, Henry Hamilton,1882      Post Magazine and Insurance Monitor ,1926      Dossier Dopage Richard Stark,1991      Brazilian American ,1924      English and French Stained Glass in the Collection of the Metropolitan Museum of Art Jane Hayward,2003      The Martindale-Hubbell Law Directory ,1986      Current Index to Journals in Education ,1998-07
