

The Digestive System

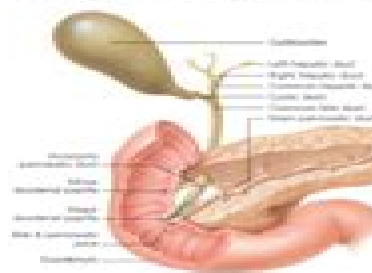

What is the digestive system?

The digestive system, or gastrointestinal tract, is a tract of organs that is responsible for digesting and absorbing nutrients from food. Food enters through the mouth, is broken down in the stomach, and then moves through the small intestine, where nutrients are absorbed. The digestive system also includes accessory organs that help in the process, such as the liver, pancreas, and gallbladder.

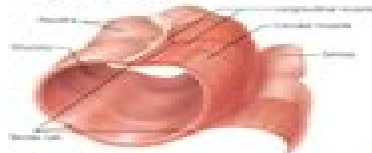

Liver, pancreas & gallbladder

After leaving the stomach, digested material enters the duodenum, the first part of the small intestine, which is connected to the stomach by the duodenal papilla. The pancreas, which is a small organ in the abdominal cavity, produces the enzyme pancreatic juice that is secreted into the duodenum. The gallbladder, a small sac-like organ, stores bile produced by the liver and releases it into the duodenum.

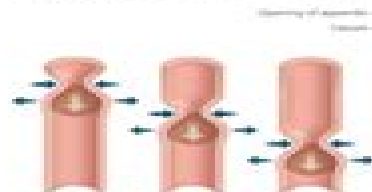

Layers of large intestine

Large intestine

The large intestine consists of the cecum, the appendix, the ascending colon, the transverse colon, the descending colon, and the sigmoid colon. It is responsible for absorbing water and electrolytes from the remaining indigestible food matter, thereby forming feces.

Peristaltic action

Food material is pushed through the digestive system by a series of powerful muscular contractions called peristalsis. These contractions move the material forward and the food is then, when the stomach has relaxed.

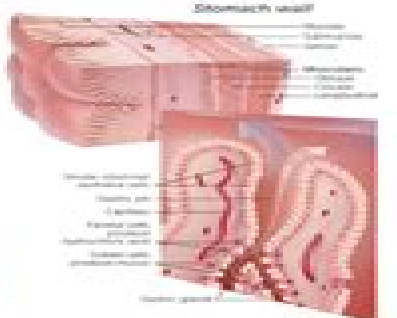

The mouth & salivary glands

Chewing, the mechanical action of the food, is called mastication. Saliva, the watery fluid secreted by the salivary glands, moistens the food and helps in the digestion of starch. The salivary glands are the parotid, sublingual, and submandibular glands.

The stomach

The stomach is a large, muscular organ that is responsible for the mechanical and chemical digestion of food. It is located in the upper abdominal cavity. The stomach wall is composed of several layers, including the mucosa, submucosa, muscularis, and serosa.

Small intestine

The small intestine consists of three parts: the duodenum, the jejunum, and the ileum. It is responsible for the chemical digestion of food and the absorption of nutrients. The small intestine is highly coiled and has a large surface area for absorption.

Absorption

The process of absorption involves the movement of nutrients from the small intestine into the bloodstream. This process occurs through the intestinal lining, which is composed of villi and microvilli.
