Bahamian Students' Experiences with Mathematics in American Universities and Colleges Nikki Rochelle Cleare, 2011

This longitudinal qualitative multi case study examines the mathematical experiences of three Bahamian students pursuing science degrees in American universities and its relationship to their previous mathematical experiences in their Bahamian high schools Drawing on cultural psychology and sociocultural theories of learning this study found that the relationship between the academic preparedness of the participants on their experiences with collegiate mathematics is not limited to subject content only The lessons learnt from the implied curriculum also play a role in their experiences with collegiate mathematics Of the three participants two have had to learn develop techniques for studying because they had not been sufficiently challenged in their previous environments to do so Each of the cases also highlights some powerful constructs needed for success in mathematics and at least two emphasize making connections between concepts procedures manipulatives tools and multiple approaches when solving problems This study contributes to an emerging area of research on student persistence in college level mathematics courses as well as to the ongoing discussions in mathematics education regarding the role importance of conceptual understanding and how to promote it The study makes visible some of the ways in which students post secondary experiences with mathematics are shaped by their perception of their mathematical preparation thus providing a basis for discussions of possible curricular change in the Bahamas It also suggests that issues such as confidence and school teacher expectations of students may play a role in the development of conceptual understanding

English Language and Literature Modupe Moyosore Alimi, Mompoloki Mmangaka Bagwasi, Patrick James Ebewo, 2020-11-09 English Language and Literature Cross Cultural Currents is a collection of essays that interrogate the precarious positions of English and African languages in an era in which English is increasingly becoming the dominant language in Africa while at the same time there is a growing resistance against it Though many Africans take pride in their own cultural heritage that is expressed by their African languages they require the economic and social benefits of English The book presents a language dilemma in which both African languages and English enhance inhibit and influence each other The data used by the authors spans a broad spectrum of sources including fiction courts parliamentary Hansards House of Chiefs classrooms internet roads and bus ranks Thus it is reflective of the most and least educated the most and least influential Africans The presentations provide broad insights about African symbols metaphors imagery and folklores representing undocumented literature that challenge scientific imperialism and deficit theories The diversity and freshness of the ideas in the book stem from the unique blend of the background of the contributors English language and literature teachers teachers of African languages educationalists sociologists historians and politicians Thus the book is a valuable asset to scholars in linguistics anthropology and language policy makers
