

LIQUID LINE FILTER-DRYER

The air conditioning unit's copper spun filter/dryer is located on the liquid line.

NOTE: Replacements for the liquid line drier must be exactly the same as marked on the original factory drier. See Source 1 for C.E.M. replacement driers.

CAUTION

Failure to do so or using a substitute drier or a granular type may result in damage to the equipment.

PIPING CONNECTIONS

The outdoor condensing unit must be connected to the indoor evaporator coil using field supplied refrigerant grade (ACR) copper tubing that is internally clean and dry. Units should be installed only with the tubing sizes for approved system combinations as specified in tabular data sheet. The charge given is applicable for total tubing lengths up to 15 feet. See Application Data Part Number 006-61920-000 for installing tubing of longer lengths and elevation differences.

NOTE: Using a larger than specified line size could result in oil return problems. Using too small a line will result in loss of capacity and other problems caused by insufficient refrigerant flow. Slope horizontal vapor lines at least 1" every 20 feet toward the outdoor unit to facilitate proper oil return.

OIL TRAPPING

When the outdoor unit is above the indoor coil oil trapping is necessary. An oil trap should be provided for every 20 ft. of rise. See Figure 2.

REFRIGERANT LINE

IMPORTANT: Do not remove protective caps from couplings until pre-charged lines are routed and ready for final connection. Protective caps prevent dirt from entering couplings and contaminating system when connected together.

1. Check size and length of precharged refrigerant lines before installing.
  - a. Check the size of the precharged refrigerant lines to insure that they are correct for the model being installed.
  - b. Check the final routing of the tubing, and insure tubing will be of adequate length, with allowance for connection at the coil and outdoor unit.
2. Copper tubing will work-harden.
  - a. The precharged tubing should be handled carefully.
  - b. Do not bend or work the tubing any more than necessary. (The larger size tubing 3/4" for example, will work-harden rapidly as it is formed. As the tubing becomes harder, it is more susceptible to kinking and damage).

3. Forming Copper.

- a. No attempt should be made to bend the suction line in a shorter radius than 12". See Figure 3.

4. How to dispose of excess tubing.

- a. Tubing may be longer than required. Coil excess tubing nearer the indoor coil rather than the outdoor unit.
- b. Excess tubing must be coiled horizontally so the flow of refrigerant is from top to bottom of the coil and toward the outdoor unit. Another method is to form a horizontal "U" large enough to take care of excess. See Figure 4.

5. Slope tubing toward outdoor unit.

- a. When the coil is above the outdoor unit, the suction line should be sloped with a fall of at least 1/4" per foot toward the outdoor unit.
- b. When the outdoor unit is above the coil, the tubing should be sloped downward along lateral distance to the bottom, or from the vertical riser.

6. Insulation of suction line.

- a. Standard suction lines come pre-insulated from the factory with 3/8" closed cell insulation, adequate for average installations.

NOTE: In regions of extreme temperatures and humidity, additional insulation may be required to prevent excessive condensation and serious loss of capacity.

- b. Do not insulate liquid and suction lines together.
- c. Liquid lines should not be insulated.
- d. Liquid lines should not be in bare contact with suction line. See Figure 5.
