Manuscript, 18. Collector's London Library traces the history of costume jewelry from ancient times to the present. It also explains how social and economic developments, changing fashions, new materials, and manufacturing techniques, as well as the Southwestern fashion of the 1940s and '50s have influenced and inspired the industry.

Over 1,000 collectible pieces are presented in full color, in a reading order format, with pieces and notes clearly displayed before each one. There are positions of 73 major international designers and historians including Josef of Badmeister, Ettore, Mies van der Rohe, and Charlotte Perle. In addition, pieces by 60 lesser known artists are displayed and praised, and there is a gallery of unusual collectible pieces.

Conventional wisdom explains the differences that make the process inevitable, and shows us step-by-step what to look out for when buying "blue" collecting tools, such as batteries and Christmas Tree pins, are featured throughout. The book also includes a glossary of materials, a list of designer's and maker's marks, and a directory of community leaders.
