Step 1 – Identify Hazards

A hazard is a condition with the potential to cause injury, illness, or death of personnel; damage to or loss of equipment or property; or mission degradation. A hazard may also be a situation or event that can result in degradation of capabilities or mission failure. Hazards exist in all environments—combat operations, stability operations, base support operations, training, garrison activities, and off-duty activities.

The factors of mission, enemy, terrain and weather, troops and support available, time available, and civil considerations (METT-TC) serve as a standard format for identification of hazards, on-duty or off-duty. The factors of METT-TC are used because they are institutionalized in the Army. They are part of the common knowledge imparted through the Army's professional military education and initial entry training.

Sources of Hazards and Risks

Hazards may arise from any number of areas, including enemy activity, accident potential, weather or environmental conditions, health, sanitation, behavior, and/or material or equipment. CRM does not differentiate among the sources of the hazard. The loss of personnel, equipment, or material due to any hazard has the same disruptive impact on readiness or mission capabilities no matter what the source. You may have a greater influence to effect change in hazards arising from behavior, accident potential, equipment, or material than over hazards that arise from enemy action. The bottom line is the effect of the hazard, not its source.

The Role of METT-TC in Hazard Identification

The factors of METT-TC provide a standard way to address both threat and hazard-based risk for tactical and nontactical operations and for off-duty activities. You can use METT-TC as part of the military decision making process (MDMP) for tactical missions. However, the same thought process works equally well for nontactical operations and the off-duty environment. The factors of METT-TC require no explanation for a tactical or operational environment. You can apply the same factors in nonmilitary activities. For the sake of clarity, however, the terms are different to reflect the nonmilitary application.

hazard

any actual or potential condition that can cause injury, illness, or death of personnel; damage to or loss of equipment, property or mission degradation; a condition or activity with potential to cause damage, loss, or mission degradation

Composite Risk Management Manual:

Composite Risk Management (FM 5-19) Department of the Army, 2012-11-16 Today's Army is challenged by a wide range of threats and operating environments. These challenges plus new technologies require our leaders to use creative measures to provide positive protection to our Soldiers and equipment. In April 1998, Field Manual FM 100-14, FM 5-19, introduced to the Army the first doctrinal publication on risk management. It detailed the application of a step-by-step process to conserve combat power and resources. This milestone manual outlined a framework that leaders could use to make force protection a routine part of planning, preparing, and executing operational training and garrison missions. Before the outset of the global war on terrorism, it became apparent that FM 100-14 would require updating to meet the needs of the future Army. Assessments also indicated that the existing manual needed to be expanded to provide clear standards and guidance on how the risk management process was to be applied. This led to this current revision. During development of this revision, the Army broadened its understanding of the risk management process to encompass all operations and activities on and off duty. This holistic approach focuses on the composite risks from all sources rather than the traditional practice of separating accident from tactical hazards and associated risks. This revision has been refocused to clearly reflect the Army's new composite approach and has been retitled Composite Risk Management CRM. CRM represents a culture change for the Army. It departs from the past "cookie cutter" safety and risk management mentality through teaching Soldiers how to think rather than telling them what to think. This manual expands the context of the original FM by focusing on the application of composite risk management to the military decisionmaking process (MDMP) and the Army training management system. It further assigns the responsibilities for conducting risk management training during initial entry training and professional military education. It is a tool that works in conjunction with the Army's on-going initiative to firmly attach CRM to all Army processes. It is a milestone document for the standardization and institutionalization of the techniques, tools, and procedures that lead to sound decisionmaking and valid risk acceptance by leaders at all levels. This revision is a full rewrite of FM 100-14. It marks a break with the past by integrating the CRM process into Army operations. CRM is not a stand-alone process, a paper work drill, or an add-on feature. Rather, it is used as a fully integrated element of detailed planning. It must be so integrated as to allow it to be executed intuitively in situations that require immediate action. CRM should be viewed as part of the military art, interwoven throughout the Army's military decisionmaking and training management cycles.
