Background

Every day, people in the City of New Brunswick send their refuse pounds of garbage that gets sent to a landfill every week away. We can keep much of this waste out of landfills by recycling and composting. Recycling paper, bottles, and even helps conserve natural resources and wildlife habitat. Composting helps build gardens, soil and reduce the use of chemical fertilizers by providing natural rich compost that is used on local farms and gardens.

When we recycle and compost, there is nothing that sends us to the dump like the trash still sent to the landfill. The City of New Brunswick and Moncton, the local waste hauler, have teamed together to create an innovative garbage collection program called Food for Thought (F.F.T.) which uses three different colored bins: green for compostables, blue for recyclables and black for trash. By using all three bins, New Brunswick residents can help thousands of tons of waste out of the landfill while helping save energy and natural resources.
