TEA AND RICE

Recent China is responsible for many inventions we still use today. For example, do you know anyone who drinks tea? Tea was first brewed in China thousands of years ago. One story says that a legendary Chinese Emperor was sitting in his garden. A leaf fell from a tree into his drinking water, and that's how tea was created!

Tea drinking did not become popular in China until the Tang Dynasty. Thousands of years later, a man named Lu Yu, called "China's Father of Tea," wrote a book about tea. The book laid out the proper rituals for tea drinking. It gradually became a cultural drink. Drinking tea also became more important in China. Tea was valuable to trade, so it began to slowly spread throughout the world.
