

Using the Hemocytometer

LAB

Learning Objectives

- 1. Calculate cell concentration from hemocytometer counts of a cell suspension.
- 2. Calculate % of cells in a population of a mixture based on counting cells in specific cell populations.

Background

Hemocytometers are the standard instruments used to measure cell concentration. Hemocytometers consist of a counting surface. The most common cell counting surface utilized today incorporates a distance in depth that is approximately 0.1 mm. This distance, along with the known area of the counting surface, yields the volume of cells that will be counted.

The quantity of cells in a volume can be used to directly represent the number of cells. However, the cell concentration can be used to determine cell and cell types. Hemocytometers are used to determine cell concentration and cell type. Hemocytometers are used to determine cell concentration and cell type. Part A: Sample Counting Technique

Counting cells with the hemocytometer is a two-step process. The counting step involves counting cells in a specific area of the counting surface.

Using the Hemocytometer

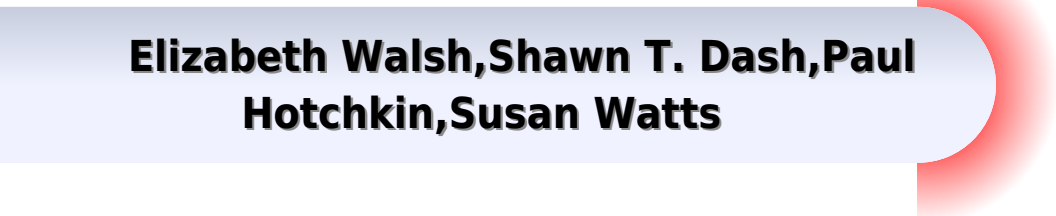

There are three basic steps to using the hemocytometer. The first step is to prepare a cell suspension. The second step is to load the hemocytometer. The third step is to count the cells. The fourth step is to calculate the cell concentration.

1. Prepare the suspension of the cells to be counted. The cells should be in a suspension of 10% cells in 10% serum.
2. Calculate the volume of the counting surface. The volume of the counting surface is 0.1 mm x 1 mm x 1 mm = 0.1 mm³.
3. Calculate the volume of the counting surface. The volume of the counting surface is 0.1 mm x 1 mm x 1 mm = 0.1 mm³.
4. Calculate the volume of the counting surface. The volume of the counting surface is 0.1 mm x 1 mm x 1 mm = 0.1 mm³.
