

Encounter Timing System

Unified timing analysis for faster design closure and signoff

Timing and signal integrity analysis can consume a significant portion of the overall silicon realization design cycle. Using Cadence® Encounter® Timing System with Encounter Digital Implementation System, design teams benefit from an advanced timing analysis infrastructure that tightly couples the design implementation environment with the timing signoff environment. This improves timing convergence throughout the design flow and greatly reduces the time to design closure. As a complete standalone solution, Encounter Timing System offers silicon-accurate timing signoff and signal integrity analysis that ensures operational chips after tapeout.

Encounter Timing System

Industry-endorsed and production-proven on both mainstream and advanced technology node designs, Encounter Timing System is a full-chip static timing analysis (STA) solution providing gate-level delay calculation, signoff-level timing and signal integrity (SI) analysis, statistical timing and leakage analysis, advanced on-chip variation analysis, and advanced node functionality required for double-patterning and waveform effects.

Designers have traditionally relied on one timing method for design implementation and a different timing method for signoff analysis. This leads to over-design with excessive timing margins and additional iterations in order to meet timing convergence throughout the place-and-route flow and correlation to timing signoff analysis at the end of the design flow.

Encounter Timing System removes the iteration bottleneck by providing a consistent, integrated Common Timing Engine for both the design implementation stage and the final timing verification stage of the design cycle. The result is correlation and convergence between implementation and signoff for faster timing closure.
