Much of life is spent on autopilot In this vast percentage of our waking time we are as somnambulists externally moving about but internally thoroughly unmoved Then there are the rare moments and experiences that take us out of that mundanity and thrust us into some other place Here experience is so intense that it encompasses evident contradictions elated but melancholic redeemed yet doomed potent to the nth degree but more deeply aware than at any other moment of the fragile and delicate state of everything and of its unbearable yet exhilarating finitude exploding with love for the entirety of creation but haughtily superior in the way of gods looking down on a fallen world The most central element of the experience is the feeling of being intoxicated with the hypnotic certainty that there exists nothing beyond what is present just then and the triumph of the illusion that one will never ever die I have tried to write some of those sacred moments to capture them in the bottle of magic that is writing and to communicate them to others in a form that might evoke something of the experience itself      Chilton's GM Nova/Chevy II, 1962-79 Repair Manual ,1997      Fleas Jeffrey DeRego,2014-05-26

The Grandview Flea Market and Farmer s Exchange or The View is an oasis of gray market commerce where antiques of questionable vintage fight for space against an explosion of bootleg designer vinyl handbags and the Chinese vendors who hock them 5 acres of muck and mire Italian sausages and hamburgers comic books and handbags cheap plastic toys and classic records all baked under the summer sun like Hell s garage sale The center of that Hell is Istanbul a former dairy barn dancehall and bingo parlor now a great indoor bazaar where the old guard of The View barter their junk Spend a weekend with the dwellers and sellers of the View as they navigate this world of cash only commerce Each tale stands alone but offers pieces of a larger story told throughout around the question of who killed Flannery Collins and what does that mean to those who call the View home      Chilton's Motor/age Automotive Service Manual ,1974      Adult Catalog: Subjects Los
