Dialectical Journal: What is a dialectical journal? A dialectical journal is another name for a double-entry journal or a reader-response journal. It is a journal that records a dialogue, or conversation, between the ideas in the text (the words being read) and the ideas of the reader (the person who is doing the reading). With Paulo Coelho's The Alchemist, students will keep a dialectical journal, which will account for two minor grades.

The journal will adhere to the following format and MLA style, and it will also include a bibliographic entry for the novel at the end.

Chapter	Quote One	Quote One Significance	Quote Two	Quote Two Significance
Prologue	"I weep for Narcissus, but I never noticed that Narcissus was beautiful. I weep because each time he knelt beside my banks, I could see, in the depths of his eyes, my own beauty reflected" (2).	Coelho defies the ignorance of the Goddess by expressing the lake's true anguish felt due to Narcissus' departure.	"Ah, it is no surprise that you weep for Narcissus" (1).	The Goddess is ignorant and believes the lake is weeping because it thought Narcissus was beautiful, but Coelho shows that the Goddess did not understand the lake to the full extent until later in the prologue.
Part One: Section One (5-16)	"Well, if you know how to read, why are you just a shepherd" (8).	The girl saying this sparks a deeper interest in the reader about why the boy is "just" a shepherd. Later, the reader realizes the deeper meaning behind the boy's choice to be a shepherd.	"I know other girls in other places" (9).	The boy saying this starts the effort of trying to forget about the girl so he can pursue his personal legend and find his treasure. His feelings about the girl are still strong at this point but this is significant because it is the first step he takes.
Part One: Section Two, (17-27)	"And this is my interpretation: you must go to the Pyramids in Egypt... There you	Even though the boy is upset at how obvious the answer he was given seemed,	"Tomorrow, at this same time, bring me a tenth of your flock. And I will tell	This statement by the king encourages the boy to continue his journey and starts
