Arbon, 1990

Dialogue Journal Writing and Adult ESL Students, a Tool for Learning

Language and Culture, 1999 Exploring Dialogue Journals with Adult ESL Learners Tina Chow, 1998 Dialogue Journals in the Multilingual Classroom Joy Kreeft Peyton, Jana Staton, 1993

This volume focuses on the use of dialogue journals in classrooms with students from diverse language and cultural backgrounds whose proficiency with spoken and written English is limited The companion volume to Dialogue Journal Communication Ablex 1988 it carefully describes from a teacher's experience how dialogue journal writing can be effectively implemented in the multilingual classroom with practical tips for starting and maintaining the practice exploiting the benefits and avoiding the pitfalls It presents a model of researchers working in close collaboration with teachers and shows the development in the journals of individual students with extended examples of student and teacher writing so that teachers can see research results that are not hopelessly extracted from the context in which they were produced At the same time it has a strong research orientation Dialogue Journals in the College ESL Writing Class Debra F. Simmons, 2005

This is a multiple case study of three Asian female writers enrolled in an English as a Second Language ESL writing class at the college level This convenience sample volunteered to share their dialogue journals written in response to the prompts designed by the primary investigator who was interning in the class Two dialogue journal lessons designed and taught by the primary investigator were analyzed to determine their value for second language college writers Findings suggested that an increase in dialogue journaling would further foster a positive learning community of writers decrease writing apprehension in ESL writers address issues of anomie nonnative writers experience at the college level increase fluency and serve as prewriting for longer essays such as the point of view and personal essays these students will be required to write in the next course in the sequence The three writers indicated that they appreciated the time devoted to dialogue journals in class as well as the interns' written responses to their journals Document Dialogue Journal Communication Jana Staton, 1988 The thesis of this volume is that writing done by students who control their own topics who have genuine purposes for writing and have a real known audience is quite different and valuable in its own right. It forms a rich source of information about how young students think, manage their social interactions and use language with competence to get things done. By selecting dialogue journal writing as a corpus for analysis, it is possible to observe children's communicative competence in using written language purposefully apart from their ability to master a particular form of writing. The central argument is that dialogue journal communication represents a kind of personal literacy prior to and more comprehensive than the particular literacies emphasized and assessed in schools. The contents include a practitioner's view of the practice itself and a summary of the research study methods developed to analyze interactive written conversations.

Semantic Methods for Knowledge Management and Communication Radosław Katarzyniak, Tzu-Fu Chiu, Chao-Fu Hong, Ngoc-Thanh Nguyen, 2011-08-04. The book consists of 31 chapters in which the authors deal with multiple aspects of modeling, utilization and implementation of semantic methods for knowledge management and communication in the context of human centered computing. It is assumed that the modern human centered computing requires the intensive application of these methods as well as effective integration with multiple techniques of computational collective intelligence. The book is organized in four parts devoted to the presentation of utilization of knowledge processing in agent and multiagent systems, application of computational collective intelligence to knowledge management models for collectives of intelligent agents and models and environments tailored directly to human centered computing. All chapters in the book discuss theoretical and practical issues related to various models and aspects of computational techniques for semantic methods which are currently studied and developed in many academic and industry centers over the world. The editors hope that the book can be useful for graduate and PhD students of computer science as well as for mature academics, researchers and practitioners interested in developing of modern methods for representation, processing and distribution of knowledge in the context of human centered computing and by means of computer based information systems. It is the hope of the editors that readers of this volume can find in all chosen chapters many inspiring ideas and influential practical examples as well as use them in their current and future work.

Applied Language Learning, 2006 Six Adult University ESL Students' Perspectives of Dialogue Journal Writing Vicki L. Holmes, 1994 Promoting English Fluency Through Peer Feedback and Dialogue Journals in an ESL College Classroom Sarah L. Stone, 2019. This study investigated research methodologies which were proven to be successful in promoting English fluency among ESL students in the college level classroom. The history of second language learning was tied to popular teaching practices such as journal writing, dialogue journals, peer feedback and teacher feedback. Due to a lack of cohesion between the above methods and a rising gap in related literature, an experiment was formed to determine whether dialogue journals could be combined with peer feedback to facilitate an accelerated comprehension of English as an L2 language. Over a three month period, 19 ESL students at Gavilan College were instructed to write about their weekly course experiences by answering one or more prompt questions in a notebook. The class was observed for both positive and negative reactions to peer encounters consistent English language use in verbal and written form and number of errors made in grammar and spelling Pre and post scores were also compared to represent whether English comprehension improved after the intervention of the peer feedback method By the end of the study field notes from the observations and an analysis of dialogue journal entries proved that students became more confident with English language use and overall English fluency increased On average 14 out of 19 participants 74% improved their grammar and 16 out of 19 participants 84% improved their spelling Therefore it can be concluded that dialogue journals and peer feedback help achieve English fluency among college level ESL students when combined simultaneously
