

Chapter 7 - Decoding Chemical Formulas

As you briefly mentioned in a previous lesson, the chemical composition of a given compound or material is represented by a chemical formula.

- The formula indicates the constituent elements and the number of atoms of each element written as a subscript. This is the "atomic per formula unit", or apfu.
- For example, gold uses the number 19, oxygen uses 16, and silicon uses 28.
- Each element abbreviation starts with a capital letter, and if a second letter is present it will always be lowercase.
- Thus, silicon is represented by the letter Si. Together with the apfu, we have the formula Si_2 . This is a simple formula with no spaces and no special signs or symbols except for the apfu and the subscript.

Consequently, the formula is simply "Si" and there are silicon atoms per formula unit.

Quartz (page 206) has a simple formula as well, " SiO_2 ", consisting of 1 silicon atom and 2 oxygen atoms per formula unit.

Pyrite (also known as Fool's Gold, page 137) has the formula " FeS_2 ", consisting of 1 atom of iron and 2 atoms of sulfur per formula unit.

Sometimes with the examples that you found in the text, the formula, as in the case of quartz, belongs to the class "group of elements" (page 206), " FeS_2 , " FeS_2Si_2 ".

In that case there is 1 Fe, 2 S, and 2 Si atoms per formula unit. This is called a unit formula (page 206) and therefore, the other tag is the unit formula up to 2 atoms per formula unit.

The Phases and Minerals of Charge Neutrality

All compounds, including all minerals, must be charge neutral.

This means that every positive charge must be balanced by a negative charge. Recall that cations have a positive charge and anions have a negative charge.

Identifying charge neutrality

1. Quartz, SiO_2 , is composed of a Si cation which has a valence of +4 and two O anions, each of -2 charge.
2. Pyrite, FeS_2 , is composed of one Fe (+2) cation, and two S (-2) anions, and that (+2) (-2) sums.

The concept of charge neutrality is important for understanding mineral substitution of iron and other elements for a given mineral, and will be discussed later in the Lecture.
