

The Components of Teeth

The outermost layer that coats a tooth is enamel. Enamel is actually harder than bone.

Teeth are composed of four dental tissues—enamel, dentin, cementum and pulp.

Dentin is calcium based. However it is still softer than enamel, and it can wear away more easily if exposed.

Cementum is a light yellow and calcium based. It is responsible for attaching a tooth to the jawbone.

The pulp of a tooth is at the center of the tooth. This component carries blood to the tooth, as well as nerves.

ORAL-AWARENESS

Function of teeth

The primary function of teeth is cutting, mixing, and grinding ingested food. Other purposes include enabling us to pronounce words.

The Proper Toothbrushing Technique

Brushing your teeth is a very important part of your dental care routine. Many people do not brush their teeth correctly and this can result in poor oral hygiene.
