Hess,Andrew J. Rotherham,Kate Burke Walsh,2004 A Qualified Teacher in Every Classroom lays out new approaches for ensuring high quality teacher preparation while offering a candid assessment of the obstacles that may impede the implementation of such new models Under the No Child Left Behind Act states will have to ensure that every public school classroom is staffed by a highly qualified teacher This mandate and the fact that many children especially low income and minority students are taught by underqualified teachers ill equipped for the challenges ahead gives new urgency to debates over teacher recruitment preparation and induction For several years these debates have been dominated by competing groups of partisans One denies that teaching requires a professional base of knowledge and skill while the other tries to promote professionalism by ensuring that traditional programs retain their control over licensure and formal certification The conflict confuses policymakers frustrates educators and stifles potentially promising solutions In this volume eleven contributors with rich experience in policy and teaching take a fresh look at a number of issues including Current systems for preparing and licensing teachers and how they affect the quality and supply of teachers in the work force An array of reform models for teacher preparation and licensure and what they would mean for the profession Questions of rigor and ideology in the core curricula of education schools or programs The federal role in teacher preparation and licensure especially in light of NCLB      Mining and Scientific Press ,1912      The Mining Journal, Railway and Commercial Gazette ,1906
