Birding In The Face Of Terror:

Birding in the Face of Terror J. Pierre Reville, 2014-11-21 Birding in the Face of Terror is a story of connection and a quest for home but a connection that challenges common assumptions about who we are and a different kind of home than Americans have come to see as a birthright It flips the bird in the face of our post 9 11 security hysteria and de facto state religion and stands ready for the backlash by pointing toward an alternate way of seeing rather than rhetoric While it seeks to tip some of our most sacred cows it is also steeped in a no nonsense spirituality that will speak to today's savvy multicultural truth seekers

BIRDING IN THE FACE OF TERROR Waldo Noesta, 2020-06-10 With the raw surreal events of September 11 2001 as the backdrop Birding in the Face of Terror follows two parallel narrators in spiritual crisis who must come to grips with psychological exiles of their own devising It is an antidote for our age of anxiety a hopepunk testament of love and wholeness for a culture broken by fear
