Dynamic Assessment of Young Children David Tzuriel, 2012-12-06 Dynamic interactive assessment has been a long time coming It has been almost a century since Alfred Binet suggested that assessment of the processes of learning should constitute a priority in the mental testing movement and over 60 years since Andre Rey made the same suggestion An important model that supports many contemporary approaches to flexible or process assessment was offered by Vygotsky in the 1920s The ground breaking work by Reuven Feuerstein and his Swiss colleagues on process assessment of North African Jewish children was done in the early 1950s In the intervening years almost every serious psychometrist has at one time or another called for emphasis on assessment of the of learning rather than an exclusive emphasis on assessment of the processes products of prior opportunities to learn One has to wonder why we have had to wait so long for formalization and instrumentation of the methods for doing just that Of course we psychologists like to do what we do well and we have learned to do static normative assessment especially of intelligence very well indeed Unfortunately it is also true that dynamic interactive assessment has not attracted or fueled the volume of high quality research that is still going to be necessary if it is to survive as a widely used supplement to static normative testing This volume incorporating a strong research base goes a long way toward remediation of that situation
