This volume provides a current look at how development of intensive live stock production particularly hogs has affected human health with respect to zoonotic diseases primarily transmitted by food but also by water air and occupational activity While information presented focuses on the development of increasing livestock production in Canada examples are given and comparisons are made with other countries Denmark Taiwan the Netherlands and the United States where the levels of livestock production are much more intense and where the industry is more mature Canada is also searching for solutions to enable handling the growing volume of its livestock waste properly Lessons learned from the experience of those who have gone before are invaluable and are drawn together in this volume to serve as useful guidance for others in plotting the courses of action possible to avoid serious environmental setbacks and negative human health effects through foodborne illness A significant portion of the text is devoted to a discussion of enteric

illness in humans caused by zoonotic pathogens The second chapter deals with survival of pathogens which cause foodborne illness in manure environments An evaluation of the human health hazard likely to occur from the use of manure as fertilizer is important because of the recent trend toward an increase in foodborne illness from the consumption of minimally processed fruits and vegetables that may have been fertilized with animal derived organic materials Integrated Monitoring in the U.S.-Canada Transboundary Region Expert Group on Monitoring,1992 The International Air Quality Advisory Board established an Expert Group on Monitoring to examine environmental monitoring programs across the entire Canada US transboundary region This report summarizes the activities of the Expert Group It begins with discussion of the integrated monitoring approach explored by the Expert Group Section 2 analyzes the monitoring project inventory sponsored by the Board and how the inventory could be improved Section 3 describes a series of workshops and meetings designed specifically to address monitoring issues of regional interest that affect the transboundary environment The primary foci of these events were the St Croix River area effects of air pollution on forests and water quality monitoring human health issues and environmental concerns on the prairies Section 4 offers observations on the workshop process Section 5 provides examples of integrated monitoring programs and activities mainly in Canada and the United States Section 6 outlines general conclusions based on the workshop results The final section contains the Expert Group's recommendations regarding the adoption of integrated monitoring and related matters NTIS Alert ,2001 Canadian Journal of Veterinary Research ,2004 The Chief Public Health Officer's Report on the State of Public Health in Canada Chief Public Health Officer (Canada),2013 Select Findings on Antimicrobial Use and Resistance Canadian Integrated Program for Antimicrobial Resistance Surveillance,2018 Infographic for the 2016 Canadian Integrated Program for Antimicrobial Resistance Surveillance CIPARS annual report Provided by publisher House of Commons Debates, Official Report Canada.
