Kass,Leon Kass,2000

Despite current concerns for family values and the dissolution of marriages Amy A and Leon R Kass see very little attention being paid to what makes for marital success They argue there are no longer socially prescribed forms of conduct that help guide young men and women in the direction of matrimony the very concepts of wooing and courting seem archaic Yet they see major discontent with the present situation and detect among their students certain longings for friendship for wholeness for a life that is serious and deep and for associations that are trustworthy and lasting longings they do not realize could be largely satisfied by marrying well Wing to Wing Oar to Oar Courting and Marrying is an anthology of source readings offered as a response to the contemporary cultural silence surrounding love that leads to marriage It addresses important questions that emerge not from theory but from practice Why marry Is this love How can I find and win the right one to marry What about sex Why a wedding and the promises of marriage What can married life be like Using readings taken mainly from classic texts of Homer Herodotus Plato Aquinas Erasmus Shakespeare Rousseau Austen Tolstoy C S Lewis Miss Manners and many others this collection challenges our unexamined opinions expands our sympathies elevates our gaze It offers a higher kind of sex education one that prepares hearts and minds for romance leading to lasting marriage and introduces us to possibilities open to human beings in everyday life that may be undreamt of in our current philosophizing This unapologetically pro marriage anthology is intended to help young people of marriageable age and their parents think about the meaning purpose and virtues of marriage and especially about finding the right person with whom to make a life Domestic Stories Gentleman author of John Halifax (the),1872
