

THE CHRISTGOU CONSUMER GUIDE

by Robert Christgau

As always, this month's Consumer Guide cleans up pre-Christmas business. All those year-end lists I compiled for the Village Voice Pazz & Jop Critics' Poll reminded me of a few putatively hi-quality epees I'd done my best to ignore, and this is where I attempt to confront them. If some of those listed seem dated, blame it on my distaste for failed competence and recurring critical riddles. Little Feat and Eno and Blue Magic and Jesse Winchester received my all-too-painstaking attention, and one of them scored, which is what makes it all worthwhile. In the end, however, I did shy away from Jackson Browne. I think he's a wimp and what else is there to say about him? Just another pretty face? Thomas Chatterton, you died too soon? You like him or you don't, and no amount of nastiness from me is going to change it.

Small pickings this month - the Christmas release was even more compromised than usual. The usual guidelines apply. Grades of B plus or above indicate ascending enthusiasm, B minus and down, descending dismay.

"David Barretto" (Mercury): If you don't believe a Fats Domino medley is likely to go with something called "Time to Sow the Seed," featuring not one but two harps, you're like me, and like me you're wrong. This is schlock with a difference, and the difference is faith. Believe me, Shadow Morton can make a believer out of anybody. B.

Blue Magic: "The Magic of the Blue" (Atco): In my gut, I've never understood groups that specialize in no backbeat falsetto ballads. The few I've liked - only the Chi-Lites and the Stylistics for more than one song at a time - barely redeemed their simplicity by sounding sincere, or do I mean dumb, and these hotshots just don't. They're too fucking professional. At their best, they sound like the Spinners, which isn't so great unless the song is. More often, they sound like the Stylistics will sound after Russell Thomkins gets his B.A. C plus.

Bob Dylan: "Blood on the Tracks" (Columbia): The first version of this album struck me as a sell-out to the memory of Dylan's pre-electric period; this recut, utilizing unknown Minneapolis studio musicians who impose nothing beyond a certain anonymous brightness on the proceedings, recapitulates the strengths of that period. Dylan's new stance is as disconcerting as all the previous ones, but the quickest and deepest surprise is in the music itself. By second hearing its loveliness is almost literally haunting, an aural deja vu. There are moments of anger that seem callow, and the prevailing theme of interrupted love recalls adolescent woes, but on the whole this is the leader's most mature and assured record. A.

Eno: "Here Come The Warm Jets" (Island): The idea of this record - top of the pops from a quasi-dadaist British synth wizard who makes out with the Soft Machine - is a lot worse than the actuality, which engages the ear and the mind in a vaguely Velvet Underground sort of way, instead of just trying to. Minimally differentiated variations on the same melody recur and recur, but it's a nice melody and chances are he meant it that way. Some good words, too. B plus.

Bryan Ferry: "Another Time, Another Place" (Atco): In which he who plays at corruption is afflicted with disease - lead poisoning, I think, affecting not only his brain but also his lungs and his pants. C plus.

Aretha Franklin: "With Everything I Feel In Me" (Atlantic): All Aretha Franklin records are not alike. In fact, her capacity not just for endurance but for adaptations is unequalled among vocalists of her generation, and in many ways this LP is more of a breakthrough than its predecessor, Let Me In Your Life. Even the ethereal direction of the change - less bottom, more (and more aimless) la-la scatting - has for its precedent the Young, Gifted and Black album's brave exploration of the spirituality of black pop. Nevertheless, I prefer Let Me In Your Life. Aretha has become such a solid property - certain to hold onto an audience for years to come, but unlikely to expand any further - that it's no longer possible to resist thinking of her as a cross between Frank Sinatra and Nancy Wilson, turning out collections as custom-designed as next year's Oldsmobile. B plus.

The Guess Who: "Flavours" (RCA Victor): The Burton Cummings part of this group always wanted it to be the Doors, Santana, and Gary Puckett and the Union Gap all rolled into one. This rather monstrous goal has finally been realized. Personally, I always preferred the part that wanted to be Bachman-Turner Overdrive. C.

George Harrison: "Dark Horse" (Apple): Such transubstantiations. In which "Bye Bye Love" becomes "Maya Love," in which "windowpane" becomes "Window brain." Can this mean that pain (pane, get it?) is the same as brain? For all this hoarse deck knows... C.

"Honk" (Epic): California eclecticism in the grateful tradition of Stoneground, with the difference in names indicating a gain in irony and the forced jollity of "Gimme That Wine" recalling the limitations of the mode. Good songwriter: Richard Seokol. Good song: "Mademoiselle." B.

Little Feat: "Feats Don't Fail Me Now" (Warner Bros.): Despite the reputation they've earned as the thinking man's bar band - classic line: "I'm gonna boogie my scruples away" - these hip Angelinos have been turning me off for three albums now, and I've figured out why: beneath that dodecaphony exterior they're closet Europeans. Their overtones may be bent and bluesy, their rhythms may have a funky catch to them, but some of those runs sound like they were copped from Rick Wakeman, and I don't even want to know where he copped them. B minus.

The Ohio Players: "Fire" (Mercury): The makers of "Shoogity-boogity" bring you: "More Shoogity-boogity." B.
