

Mitigate risks linked to Business Objects conformity

Business Objects report regression testing and more precisely, automated comparisons of BO report datasets is a tricky but very important task. Maintaining accuracy and consistency of BusinessObjects reports is critical. Automated BusinessObjects testing allows to mitigate risks due to manual testing. The current state of the art is manual testing. But how is it done manually? There are Alt+Tab users displaying report.rpt in two browsers, for instance in X3 and B4 and then compare outputs (going down to pixel level can be tricky for human eyes). Then, there are dual-screen users: but I am pretty sure this solution is less accurate compared to the Alt+Tab method. Finally, there is what I used to do while performing migrations, 20 years ago, working on BO3 and migrating from BO3 to BOv4: printing both versions and then overlaying the printed documents in front of a window to try and highlight differences! Again artisanal way. Plus, that was not ecologically-friendly! There are also two last categories: NO TEST and vague similarity test. So let's get started with a professional way of performing regression testing!

BI tools, and especially SAP BusinessObjects, are now widely used within organizations to manage and drive businesses! Those products can be used to manage and report very sensitive data such as HR, Healthcare (patient data) or financial records. Thus, it is needed to ensure compliance and conformity, especially dealing with data following regulations such as SOX, Basel, HIPAA, FDMA, etc. We have developed solutions to help clients ensure compliance from a strict security perspective (everything started for us from this need). We have a famous concrete use case: the US Department of Homeland Security making use of 360eyes (<https://360eyes.io/360-eyes-visual-object-visual-impact-analyse-metadata/>) and 360view (<https://360view.io/360-view-object-visual-impact-analyse-metadata/>) to ensure FDMA compliance (as detailed in the document on the ADUC website). The current topic is not related to security, but to data itself or BO report datasets. Indeed, when dealing with conformity, you need to ensure that security is properly defined and that you can provide comprehensive outputs for internal and external auditing (again exactly what 360view and 360eyes do). When demonstrating 360view, for instance, I am used to saying (real story based on my 20 years of experience as an administrator): "If end users have no access to their own content or cannot use it, they will contact the admin asking for immediate assistance. BUT if the same user can see the payroll of any employee, they
