

The „ARCHIMEDES“

2-CYLINDER PORTABLE BOAT MOTOR

CONSTRUCTION.

THE „Archimedes“ portable boat motor, which is built on the 2-cycle principle, is the only 2-cylinder portable motor on the market.

The two cylinders are in line with and directly opposed to each other with the vertical motor shaft between, and the two pistons move in a direction towards or from each other as shown in fig. 3. This design insures perfect balance of the reciprocating parts and vibration is as a consequence reduced to a minimum in this motor.

It is obvious that this freedom from vibration is of special value in a portable motor, as these motors are mostly used on less substantially built boats and liable to shake the boat to pieces if not well balanced.

Fig. 1.

Fig. 2.
2 H. P. Motor.

The „Archimedes“ is the only portable motor on the market, which is perfectly balanced.

The 2-cylinder design also offers double security. Thus, if, for one reason or other, the ignition in one of the cylinders fails, the motor will work with the other cylinder just the same. If you wish to reduce the speed by running with only one cylinder, you have only to disconnect one of the spark plugs, which is done in a moment, and without stopping the motor. This is naturally a great advantage, as you, on fishing tours for instance, will be able to troll all the way and regulate the motor at any speed desired. Naturally the motor consumes considerably less petrol, when one cylinder is disconnected.

The wear and tear is considerable less in the „Archimedes“ motor than in a motor of the one-cylinder design, as the work in the former is done by two cylinders and by two pistons, the combined areas of which are 50 % greater than the corresponding areas
