Understanding and Supporting Product-Service System Designing Abhijna Neramballi, 2020-04-06 This licentiate thesis aims to establish the basis for scientifically understanding and supporting the cognitive processes involved in the conceptual design of resource efficient and effective product service systems PSSs. The research carried out is transdisciplinary in nature and includes both prescriptive and descriptive studies. First, the cognitive nature of conceptual PSS designing is investigated. Multiple pre-experimental protocol studies in a laboratory setting are carried out to do so. The cohort of these explorative studies includes experienced industrial practitioners conceptually designing a resource efficient PSS. These descriptive studies provide quantitative insights into the cognitive effort expended by designers on various design issues and processes during conceptual PSS designing and its potential differences to conceptual product designing. These insights form the basis for future research that can eventually shine light on this complex process with statistically significant empirical results. Second, the essence of extant prescriptive PSS design principles, methods, and tools is distilled through a literature analysis and synthesis of the state of the art. Subsequently, important aspects that need to be considered during conceptual PSS designing are consolidated in the form of a PSS design schema. Third, a design navigator named lifecycle oriented function deployment LFD is developed. LFD is essentially a contextual decision making support tool developed to guide the conceptual designing of environmentally benign PSSs. This tool informs the designers regarding the potential environmental impacts of specific design parameters of an existing offering. It subsequently guides the designers in the redesign of this existing offering into a PSS with relatively benign environmental impacts. Fourth, the effects of the two proposed prescriptions are tested empirically. True experimental protocol studies are carried out in a laboratory setting to test the effects of the prescriptive PSS design schema on the cognition of PSS designers. LFD is applied in an industrial case study using the action design research method to support the conceptual redesign of an existing product centric offering into an environmentally benign PSS. Environmental impacts of the PSS concepts generated using LFD are then evaluated in comparison to that of the existing offering using simulated lifecycle assessment. A semi-structured interview is carried out to evaluate the utility and usability of LFD with the company personnel involved in the conceptual redesign process. This licentiate thesis is an effort to effectively design the future research work of the author. This future work will aim to support and establish generalizable scientific knowledge regarding the conceptual designing of resource efficient and effective PSSs. Challenges Students

She has also developed a desire to prepare the next generation of teachers as they embark on their career educating students who come into their lives. Challenges Students with Learning

Disabilities Face without Transition Programs to Post Secondary Institutions was developed as a dissertation topic since Dr Warian wanted to know what programs are available to students with learning disabilities as they prepare to transition to post secondary institutions Dr Warian is familiar with services that are available to students with learning disabilities in the K 12 school environment and felt a need to investigate what programs if any are available to this population of students at the post secondary level Administrators of post secondary institutions would benefit from reading this text to provide them guidance in what to provide to students with learning disabilities that are enrolled in their institution Investigating post secondary institutions private and public in the state of New Jersey few institutions provide programs for students with learning disabilities Information provided in this work from institutional websites as well as participants experiences indicates a need at the post secondary level to ensure students with a learning disability have the same opportunity as their non learning disabled peers at the post secondary level efforts and involvement of various groups of people. These groups are referred to as the project stakeholders. For successful implementation of a construction project, stakeholder management has got a crucial role. Stakeholder management is not an easy task and it needs proper consideration for successful implementation of a construction project. Based on the observations and previous researches, a gap has been identified regarding evaluation of stakeholder involvement during planning stage of the construction projects in Pakistani Construction industry. Therefore, the current research aims at the evaluation of level of stakeholder involvement during planning stage of construction projects at Pakistan level. One of the aims of this research is also to understand the concept of the stakeholder involvement in the construction industry and for examining the ways that stakeholder engagement can be empowered appropriately and efficiently to assist in achieving the ultimate goals of the project in shape of project outcomes. Through the literature, major stakeholders involved in a construction project are identified as client, project management team, consultant and design team, contractor, sub-contractor, suppliers, employees, local communities, sponsor, and government authorities. The involvement level of these stakeholders has been assessed on different project planning activities. The results show that early stakeholder involvement helps the organization for finding better solutions for the problems. Moreover, it helps in aligning the project goals with stakeholder expectations. In different planning activities, different involvement levels of stakeholders have been identified. Project managers have the highest involvement during the planning stage, and local communities have the least. It revealed that considerable attention should be given to empowering the more effective incorporation of different project members during the project planning process. Analysis of the result also confirmed the findings from the literature stating that an effective involvement of stakeholders will highly contribute to resolving or improving several issues involved in the project early. It is therefore recommended that the project managers should adopt improved decision making strategies for effective stakeholder involvement, employing the different useful technique.
