Abstract

With the in-depth development of cross-cultural exchanges, many excellent foreign film and television works are popularized in China, and the correct translation of movie subtitles ensures the accurate transmission of the information in the cultural products. Therefore, subtitle translation is becoming more and more important in the translation world. The Broke Sisters is a very characteristic humor comedy, which leaves a deep impression on people. But very often, the audience may not understand the plot of the drama, so excellent subtitle translation is essential. Based on Zhang Delu scholars' comprehensive theoretical framework of multimodal discourse analysis, this paper interprets the subtitles of The Broke Sisters from four dimensions: culture, context, content, and expression, aiming to analyze how the translator applies the theory of multimodal discourse analysis and combines language with visual, auditory and other modalities in the hope of providing more lessons for the cause of subtitle translation in China.

1.1. Multimodal Discourse Analysis Theory and Subtitle Translation

The term "modality" refers to the "symbolic resources formed in society and culture to create meaning", which expresses the way of interaction between human beings and the outside world; the interaction with a single sense is called unimodal, and the interaction with three or more senses is called multimodal. In today's society, with the rapid development of media technology and short video multimedia technology, the way of information dissemination is gradually becoming networked and videoized, and multimodal discourse analysis, as an emerging discipline, has a wider application. Multimodal discourse refers to the phenomenon of using multiple senses, such as hearing, vision, touch, etc., to communicate through language, image, sound, movement, and other means and symbolic resources. Based on the theory of systemic functional linguistics and the comprehensive multi-symbolic model framework, Zhang Delu proposes a comprehensive theoretical framework for multimodal discourse analysis, consisting of four dimensions: culture, context, content and expression. The four levels are interrelated: cultural, context refers to the whole cultural background of language communication, context refers to the specific environment of language communication, and cultural context is composed of countless situational contexts. Situational contexts determine discourse forms, and discourse forms are reflected in discourse meanings. In language communication, all modal material forms are attributed to the two systems of linguistic media and non-linguistic media.

Since the proposal of a comprehensive theoretical framework for multimodal discourse analysis, more and more scholars have developed multimodal discourse research from the four levels of culture, context, content and expression. Yin (2020), Liang Yanzhi (2016) launched a

Conclusions Postcolonial Polysystems Haidee Kruger, 2012 Postcolonial Polysystems The Production and Reception of Translated Children's Literature in South Africa is an original and provocative contribution to the field of children's literature research and translation studies. It draws on a variety of methodologies to provide a perspective both product and process oriented on the ways in which translation contributes to the production of children's literature in South Africa with a special interest in language and power as well as post and neocolonial hybridity. The book explores the forces that affect the use of translation in producing children's literature in various languages in South Africa and shows how some of these forces precipitate in the selection, production and reception of translated children's books in Afrikaans and English. It breaks new ground in its interrogation of aspects of translation theory within the multilingual and postcolonial context of South Africa as well as in its innovative experimental investigation of the reception of domesticating and foreignising strategies in translated picture books. The book has won the 2013 EST Young Scholar Prize.
