1. Analyze causes and consequences of the Cold War. Please be specific with your evidence.

There were many causes of the Cold War between America and the Soviet Union. Many Western economic elites were threatened by communism, especially after the Great Depression weakened Europe's economy. They also feared a worldwide revolution after China and a few other countries followed Russia's communist ideals. Winston Churchill stated in a famous speech that an "iron curtain" was formed between West Europe and the Soviet Union, the curtain a metaphor of tension and divide in the Old World. To protect themselves from Soviet growth, the United States formed NATO with several other nations, and this replaced the League of Nations. In response, the Soviet Union formed the Warsaw Pact with other socialist countries, further increasing tension between the two sides. After Europe being left penniless after World War 2, the US executed the Marshall Plan to provide more than $20 billion to Europe to strengthen Europe and revive the economy so the US had someone to back them up in this conflict with the USSR. Overall, the increasing tension between the US and Europe and the USSR and other communist nations due to European fear of losing free market and private property. The Cold War left the whole world shaking in their boots. After Hiroshima, nuclear weapons had become the new competition between the USSR and America. Many people feared that if the Cold War became a bomb-standoff, the world would fall apart. Although the Cold War was indirectly fought and never involved American soil, it caused the Korean War in 1953 and the Vietnam War in which South Vietnam was aided by America against communist North Vietnam.

2. Analyze causes and consequences of decolonization in Africa from 1945-1975. Please be specific with your evidence.

After World War 2 and the Great Depression, Britain and France had incredibly weakened, while the African middle class was becoming more and more nationalistic. In Algeria, the Vietnamese victory against France inspired an uprising in which the Front de Liberation National, an Algerian revolutionary, was created. Bitter French colonists, who consisted of 10% of the Algerian population, also delayed the independence of the nation. In many other colonies, their independence was also delayed by the settlers. Finally, in 1962, Algeria gained independence and the angry settlers went back to France. Although Algeria became autonomous through revolution, most other colonies became free through negotiation, especially the British colonies. Improvements in society, like medical care and new technology, caused native African populations to boom. These higher populations became increasingly nationalist. Due to schools and labor associations, colonialism offered centers of highly-educated, nationalistic leaders to gather and grow in number. Leaders like Nkrumah went to Catholic mission schools and studied in America or Europe, where he gained a sense of independence and pride in his own race. Nkrumah later made Ghana independent and was prime minister for some time. However, the French government was less lenient compared to the UK due to the French becoming highly dependent on their African colonies during World War 2. However, by 1960, most of Africa became independent from France and England. Despite this, colonial settlers still created environments of discrimination and racism through the apartheid system. Many indigenous Africans were moved to the outskirts, in way poorer regions compared to the developed cities the settlers resided in.

4. Analyze how Latin America tried to achieve economic freedom from 1945-1975. Please be specific with your evidence.
