

Chapter 6 : Police and Criminal Justice System A.

- The jail administration runs various vocational and technical programmes like carpentry, weaving, tailoring, food processing, pottery, shoe making and bakery to rehabilitate its prisoners.
 - An offence where the police is bound to register a case and proceed with investigations is called cognizable offence. An offence in which the police need not lodge a criminal complaint is called noncognizable offence.
 - A police station is called the basic unit in the police organisation because here the actual work of maintenance of law and order, prevention and control of crime and protection of life and property of the community is undertaken.
 - First Information Report (FIR) contains a statement of facts made in writing by the complainant to report an offence that has been committed.
 - In some states, between the police station and the sub-divisions there are circles which is headed by an inspector of police. These are called police circles. B.
1. States are further divided into districts. The Superintendent of Police (SP) heads the district police force. Districts are sometimes grouped into a range, which is looked after by the Deputy Inspector General of Police (DIGP). Some states have zones comprising two or more ranges under the charge of an Inspector General of Police (IGP). A sub-division is under the charge of an officer Assistant Superintendent of Police (ASP).
 2. Criminal justice is a process, involving a series of steps beginning with a criminal investigation and ending with the release of a convicted offender from correctional supervision. Rules and decision making are at the center of this process. The major steps in processing a criminal case are-
 - i. Investigation of a crime by the police.
 - ii. Arrest of a suspect by the police.
 - iii. Prosecution of a criminal defendant by a district attorney.
 - iv. Indictment by a grand jury or the filing of an information by a prosecutor.
 - v. Arraignment by a judge.
 - vi. Pretrial detention or bail.
 - vii. Plea bargaining between the defense attorney and the prosecutor.
 - viii. Trial of guilt by a judge or jury.
 - ix. Sentencing by a judge.
 - x. Appeals filed by attorneys in appellate courts and then ruled on by appellate judges.
 - xi. Punishment or rehabilitation administered by local, state or federal correctional authorities.
 3. The person who represents the case on behalf of the state against the person accused of a crime is called a Public Prosecutor. He/She is appointed by the state to play an impartial role in bringing about a fair trial whether it is in favour or against the accused person.
 4. The constitution ensures that every citizen of India gets a fair trial by the following manner:-
 - It is the right of every citizen to be informed of the crime at the time of arrest.
