Magic Dreams. Sergey Baimukhametov,2016-03-03 All over the world adolescents are at one time or another confronted with the strong temptation to try narcotics This terrifying book is a compendium of arguments against presented in a form anyone can understand It is written on a level unknown to most Americans and especially children The book presents real confessions of real drug addicts aged 17 to 42 horrifying stories accompanied by comments of the author medical specialists teachers and representatives of the police This book is full of common sense It is not the usual and useless book of anti drug propaganda full of threats of irreversible brain damage which to adolescents is a pure abstraction This work introduces them to the nightmarish experiences of drug addicts told in their own words Its brutally honest narratives will dispel any aura of glamour that may have surrounded narcotics in the minds of some adolescents and scare them so badly that they will never give in to the impulse to try them at least that s what many experts and media reviewers say The main reason so many of our children do succumb to the initial temptation to use drugs is that they don t know the real truth the real consequences of doing so After reading this book they will know it Here is what one Russian blogger with a specific name Angry Vampire writes about this book Such first person accounts always get you where you live They ought to print Magic dreams at government expense and give it to middle school classes to read so that when these kids hear the words meth heroin or shoot up it would trigger an involuntary gag reflex That would throw cold water on them once and for all And another blogger writes Not long ago I happened to get a hold of this book by Sergey Baimukhametov I began reading it just before going to bed And I just couldn t do it I rushed to my mom and woke her up with my wild screaming Mom I m scared All of you my peers read it Let all of us be too scared even to think about drugs to say nothing of touching them It is no wonder that Magic dreams proved to be a bestseller in Russia and as of this writing has been published in 18 editions Junkie William S. Burroughs,1953

Addiction and the Recent American Novel Marek Lewandowski,2020-06-08 Master s Thesis from the year 2012 in the subject English Language and Literature Studies Literature grade 2 1 University of Stirling English course English Literature language English abstract In order to begin to explore the evolution of the notion of addiction and understand how it has become an integral element of today s reality it is first important to establish a historical foundation by resorting to the reports of individuals who we know were involved in substance use some of whom perhaps did not experience the burden of addiction themselves but knew or cared for addicts These texts were an appeal to the imagination expressions of misery loss and degradation They open up the history of addiction and give valuable insight into how tendencies changed over time how present day social norms values and beliefs on the topic formed and what led to the mechanism of addiction becoming firmly ingrained into Western society Romanticism was fascinated by the irrational quality of dreams nightmares reveries and hallucinations Many of the pleasures and pains of De Quincey s love affair with his chosen substance were shared by writers like Coleridge whose stories of composing poetry like the one of how he found inspiration to compose Kubla Khan 1797 showed clearly the role that intoxicants and the dreams induced by them played in the process of imaginative creation Molly Lefebure s narco biography of Coleridge A Bondage of Opium 1974 effectively argues that he and De Quincey supplied an early typology of the addict their lives were itinerant they left grand literary schemes unfulfilled and they were dogged by poverty and squalor Also Fanny Trollope in late middle age is known to have established a routine of writing her books by night helped by laudanum and green tea Viper Raymond Thorp,1960 Medical Review of Reviews ,1917 The Hundredth Man. Confessions of a Drug Addict ... Illustrated. [With Portraits.]. Cecil De Lenoir,1933 The Confessions of a Twentieth Century Hobo Digit (pseud.),1924 Confessions of a Sociopath Andrew L. Morgan,2013-08-28 Confessions of a Sociopath tells the true story of Andrew Morgan Morgan could be your neighbor He could be a business colleague He could be your best friend But Morgan is struggling with an issue that not even those closest to him know about Morgan is a sociopath He has no conscience He commits atrocious acts rampant infidelity larceny and pathological lying without regret remorse or guilt Morgan suffered a career setback while still in his 20 s It affected him so profoundly that he was diagnosed as suffering from Anthropophobia which is defined as a pathological fear of people or human company It is an extreme pathological form of shyness and timidity For a man whose career is rooted in sales and marketing and who had been highly successful at it before suffering the trauma of his setback such a diagnosis only caused him to spiral even further downward To deal with his condition a friend recommended he see a psychiatrist Morgan did And he was prescribed a highly addictive anti anxiety medication which began twenty years of dependence on the drug He was an addict Morgan also began drinking heavily because alcohol had the same anti anxiety effect as his drugs Xanax At his peak Morgan was taking up to 20 mg per day ten times the maximum daily therapeutic dose So in addition to being an addict he was also now an alcoholic a drunk Warned of the dangers of combining alcohol and Xanax Morgan did so anyway In this case it wasn't that 3 3 6 but more like 3x3 9 And with his inhibitions gone while he was under the influence of drugs and booze Morgan committed some of the most repugnant acts imaginable Ultimately this is a story of triumph But before the victory over his addictions Morgan had caused a lot of damage to his reputation his career his family and himself Now clean and sober he tells his story something which he would not have been able to do during his active addictions and when he was in complete denial The Medical Economist ,1917 California. Court of Appeal (2nd Appellate District). Records and Briefs California (State)., Helen's Scars Johanna Sparrow,H. Smith,2017-06-04 Everyone has a story to tell I've just been contemplating if the world was ready to hear mine You would be surprised at who will try to stop you from telling your story as if it will affect them Where were those so called family members when I was killing myself on the streets looking for love I am here only by the grace of God I have scars and my scars cover me from head to toe Isn't it funny how in the midst of your darkest hours of life and sin that darkness tries to make you laugh It makes you forget about all the sorrow and pain it put you through before issuing you another gut wrenching blow of misfortune But life never really offered me a laugh I found my comfort by diving into a life of drugs and prostitution My life was anything but perfect And I knocked busters on their ass men twice my size to prove that I would not be taken advantage of in these streets Fighting my brothers and sisters was a way of life My family outcast me and my mamma turned her back to me while I was treated like trash in my own family Abuse neglect suicide drug addiction and prostitution were a part of my darkest hours of life Could it be that my mind has been trying to outrun my pain and sorrow all these years Or is it that my pain doesn't want me to forget what has happened I thought that if I got married life would change for me but looking back on it and laughing now married life did not treat me any better And that's because my husband was strung out on heroin and running the streets sleeping with crackheads and whores My family outcast me and my husband beat me I laid down to die as a way to escape the pain I was feeling but death didn't want me not then How did I get myself out of such a predicament I did by the grace and mercy of God I know that diamonds are precious stones They are ugly to look at in their natural state and found amongst rocks and dirt walked on by people who don't know their worth I was a diamond and did not know my worth so long ago I was stepped on in life and by people I loved and who I thought loved me I added to my darkest hours with my own hands by the things that I was doing I don't deny it Today I am delivered no longer living in life's darkest hours I've survived my hell on earth and not ashamed to tell my story Getting here wasn't easy I cried many nights but I am here strong standing in God's mercy and grace I've overcome it all and if I can survive my darkest hours of life and find peace and happiness so can you
