Darwin Proposed a Mechanism for Evolution

The idea that life evolves may have been first proposed by Lucretius, a Roman philosopher who lived nearly 2,000 years ago before the modern theory of evolution was proposed. Then, in 1859, the English naturalist Charles Darwin, shown in Figure 1, published convincing evidence that species evolve, and he proposed a reasonable mechanism explaining how evolution occurs.

Like all scientific theories, the theory of evolution has developed through decades of scientific observation and experimentation. The modern theory of evolution began to take shape as a result of Darwin's work. Today almost all scientists accept that evolution is the basis for the diversity of life on Earth.

As a youth, Darwin struggled in school. His father was a wealthy doctor who wanted him to become either a doctor or a minister. Not interested in the subjects his father urged him to study, Darwin frequently spent more time outdoors than in class. At the age of 16, Darwin was sent to Edinburgh, Scotland, to study medicine. Repelled by surgery, which at the time was done without anesthetics, Darwin repeatedly skipped lectures to collect biological specimens. In 1827, Darwin's father sent him to Cambridge University, in England, to become a minister. Although he completed a degree in theology, Darwin spent much of his time with friends who were also interested in natural science.

In 1831, one of Darwin's professors at Cambridge recommended him for a position as a naturalist on a voyage of HMS Beagle. Although the ship had an official naturalist, the Beagle's captain preferred to have someone aboard who was of his own social class. At the age of 22, Darwin set off on a journey that would both change his life and forever change how we think of ourselves. The ship and its route are shown in Figure 2.
