Readers in History James L. Machor, 1993 Nineteenth century America witnesses an unprecedented rise in reading activity as a result of increasing literacy advances in printing and book production and improvements in transporting printed material As the act of reading took on new cultural and intellectual significance American writers had to adjust to changes in their relationship with a growing audience Calling for a new emphasis on historical analysis Readers in History reconsiders reader response and reception approaches to the shifting contexts of reading in nineteenth century America James L Machor and his contributors dispute the essentializing tendency of much reader response criticism to date arguing that reading and the textual construction of audience can best be understood in light of historically specific interpretive practices ideological frames and social conditions Employing a variety of perspectives and methods including feminism deconstruction and cultural criticism the essays in this volume demonstrate the importance of historical inquiry for exploring the dynamics of audience engagement

Schools of Sympathy Nancy Roberts, 1997-09-12 Roberts argues that Clarissa's Hester's Isabel's and Tess's heroism or greatness is measured not by her actions but by the extent to which others are moved by her Therefore the character cannot be studied without studying the response she generates which in these novels is sympathy Roberts asserts that each of the novels can be understood as a school of sympathy through which we learn to behave and feel as gendered subjects and that our response to the heroine is as carefully crafted as the character herself Schools of Sympathy addresses issues of masochism female victimization the power of passive seduction and the possibilities of heroism As a counterpoint to these eighteenth and nineteenth century male perspectives Roberts examines works by Margaret Atwood and Angela Carter that explicitly address these issues
