1. Abstract The purpose of this study was to determine the effect of a 12-week, low-intensity, supervised walking program on the physical and psychological health of sedentary, middle-aged women. The study was a randomized, controlled trial. The intervention group (n = 20) participated in a 12-week walking program, while the control group (n = 20) remained sedentary. The walking program was designed to be low-intensity and supervised. The primary outcome was the change in physical health, measured by the 6-minute walk test (6MWT) and the 400-meter walk test (400MWT). The secondary outcome was the change in psychological health, measured by the Beck Depression Inventory (BDI) and the State-Trait Anxiety Inventory (STAI). The results showed that the walking program had a significant positive effect on physical health, with the intervention group showing a significant increase in 6MWT and 400MWT compared to the control group. There was no significant difference in psychological health between the two groups. The findings suggest that a 12-week, low-intensity, supervised walking program can improve physical health in sedentary, middle-aged women.
