Mass and Weight

Excellent evidence is furnished for a connection among mass, weight, and acceleration. Astronauts in space freely selected various objects and also observed which ones seemed to fall most rapidly. In other words, the faster objects fell, the more mass they had. Astronauts also observed that objects with different masses fell with the same acceleration. These observations were interpreted to mean that weight is not related to acceleration, even though acceleration, according to the observations, is related to mass and weight.

A comparison of mass and weight can be made. Characteristically, objects with the same mass but different weights will fall at the same rate. In the case of objects with the same mass, the weight is proportional to the mass.

The change that astronauts perceived in the situation is proportional to the change in weight.
