Investing in Africa Vijaya Ramachandran,2000 In this essay Dr Ramachandran examines the constraints to private sector growth in Sub Saharan Africa She addresses two sets of issues the constraints on firm level productivity and the barriers to investment in the private sector Focusing on the manufacturing sector the author identifies and analyzes several key problems that are responsible for low productivity and investment levels in Africa Finally she outlines policies that may lead to the improvement of productivity and investment levels and the role of national and international agencies in promoting these strategies The author begins by comparing manufacturing sector productivity across developing countries and then examines some of the reasons for the gap between African productivity and that of the rest of the developing world The key questions with regard to the productivity gap include the following Can African labor compete with labor from other developing countries Is the vintage of capital equipment a barrier to raising productivity How can African firms build export capacity and become competitive in global markets What types of firms are growing the fastest in Africa How efficient is the market for credit in the private sector and how does this impact firm level productivity Recognizing that Africa s potential to attract private sector investment is at the heart of its ability to achieve a high rate of economic growth the author identifies some of the major problems faced by investors in the private sector In particular she focuses on foreign direct investment because of its critical role in generating growth in the early stages of industrial development By using case studies and other material she examines foreign investment trends in Africa the impact of this investment in terms of output and employment and the problems faced by new investors in Sub Saharan Africa The author concludes with specific recommendations for generating growth in the private sector and for improving productivity and investment levels in Africa Finally she suggests concrete steps that national and international policymakers can take to improve the climate for investment in Africa
