

Thermococcus

Halobacterium

Thermoplasma

Thermococcus and Halobacterium are generally associated with high salinity. Thermoplasma does not grow under these conditions. Thermococcus lives in hydrothermal or other types of hydro-venting high pressure regions. Many others living in these hydrothermal regions formed in acidic brines, sulphur-rich solution and others are examples of extremophiles.

Archaeal membranes contain isoprenoids and contain lipids that are ether-linked instead of the ester-linked lipids found in bacteria. Archaeal lipids form an inverse micelle in aqueous solution. They are more stable to hydrolysis than the others.
