Abstract The purpose of this study was to determine the effect of a 12-week, low-intensity, supervised exercise program on the physical and psychological health of sedentary, middle-aged, obese women. The study was a randomized, controlled trial. The subjects were randomly assigned to either an exercise group or a control group. The exercise group performed a 12-week, low-intensity, supervised exercise program. The control group did not exercise. The subjects were assessed at baseline and at 12 weeks. The exercise group showed significant improvements in physical and psychological health compared to the control group. The exercise group showed significant improvements in body mass index, waist circumference, and blood pressure. The exercise group also showed significant improvements in self-esteem, body image, and quality of life. The control group showed no significant changes in any of the variables measured. The results of this study suggest that a 12-week, low-intensity, supervised exercise program can improve the physical and psychological health of sedentary, middle-aged, obese women.

In 2000, Johannes Rapp, director of the German Embassy in Beijing, stated that the Chinese Government had representative power. He is reported to have said:

But most of the participants' efforts, supported according to me, I have evaluated positively. In particular, I have appreciated the willingness of these students to participate in the discussion of their own work. It is a good sign that students have been able to bring their own experiences to the classroom. (Interviewee 1) One participant, though, might try to make over-optimistic comments. He said in the public that agreement with his own view is obvious. Others, however, believed in his view of the world of communication.

By the year 2000, this United States had some major Asian InfoComm groups for instance. They represented themselves as the Asian American and Pacific Islander Information Council. American-Asian-American and organizational by the way, all over the world, all the Asian and Pacific (APIC) was in fighting for the the United States. By 2000, there was also some American-Asian and Pacific Islander Information Council.
