8. Motor Power Sizing

The fan BHP shown on the fan rating sheet is the net fan brake horsepower based on the ideal conditions of fan test. The actual operating conditions of cooling tower is quite different from the test conditions of fan maker and the actual fan efficiency will be different from the environmental factor like the inlet and exit air flow conditions, tip clearance, obstructions to air flow, plenum geometry, etc. Therefore, a proper environmental correction factor should be considered to both total pressure and horsepower.

Ventilatoren Sirroco Howden who is supplying the fans had published a paper about the influence on the fan performance as follows;

1) Influence of Fan Inlet Shapes

Refer to example 6-4 how much the resistance is increased for the inlet shape other than $R/D = 0.15$.

2) Influence of Obstacles present in the air flow of the fan

The influence of fan performance due to the obstacles under the fan depends on the ratio of distance of leading edge of fan blade from the obstacles and the fan stack throat diameter, and on the ratio of area of obstacles and area of fan stack throat. The smaller of the ratio of distance and the larger of the ratio of area, the higher of resistance correction factor. In most cases, the additional pressure drop coefficient due to the obstacles is within 0.1 to 0.15.

3) Influence of Tip Clearance
