

Chapter 16: The Molecular Basis of Inheritance

LO 16.1: Describe the structure of DNA and evidence that it is the genetic material.

1. Define transformation.

Transformation is a change in genotype and phenotype due to the assimilation of external DNA by a cell. When the external DNA is from a member of a different species, transformation results in horizontal gene transfer.

2. What did Oswald Avery, McCarty, and MacLeod determine to be the transforming factor?

DNA

3. How did Hershey and Chase “label” viral DNA and viral protein so that they could be distinguished? Explain why they chose each radioactive tag considering the chemical composition of DNA and protein.

Hershey and Chase used radioactive isotopes of sulfur to tag protein in one batch of T2 and a radioactive isotope of phosphorus to tag DNA in a second batch. Because proteins, but not DNA, contain sulfur, radioactive sulfur atoms were incorporated only into the protein of the phage. In a similar way, the atoms of the radioactive isotope of phosphorus labeled only the DNA, not the protein, because nearly all the phage’s phosphorus is in its DNA.

4. Describe the means by which Hershey and Chase established that only the DNA of a phage enters an E. coli cell. What conclusions did these scientists draw based on these observations?

Separate samples of the nonradioactive E. coli cells were allowed to be infected by the protein-labeled and DNA-labeled batches of T2. The researchers then tested the two samples shortly after the onset of infection to see which type of molecule—protein or DNA—had entered the bacterial cells and would therefore be capable of reprogramming them. Hershey and Chase found that the phage DNA entered the host cells but the phage protein did not. Hershey and Chase concluded that the DNA injected by the phage must be

Biology: How Life Works (Volume 1) James Morris, 2013-01-04 Ordinarily textbooks are developed by first writing chapters then making decisions about art and images and finally once the book is complete assembling a test bank and ancillary media This process dramatically limits the integration across resources and reduces art media and assessments to ancillary material rather than essential resources for student learning Biology How Life Works is the first project to develop three pillars the text the visual program and the assessment at the same time All three pillars were developed in parallel to make sure that each idea is addressed in the most appropriate medium and to ensure authentic integration These three pillars are all tied to the same set of core concepts share a common language and use the same visual palette In this way the text visual program and assessments are integral parts of student learning rather than just accessories to the text
