

MATH 135: Extra Practice for Chapter 2

These problems are for extra practice and are not to be handed in. Solutions will not be posted but, unlike assignment problems, they may be discussed in depth on Piazza.

- The warm-up exercises are intended to be fairly quick and easy to solve. If you are unsure about any of them, then you should review your notes and possibly speak to an instructor before beginning the corresponding assignment.
- The recommended problems supplement the practice gained by doing the corresponding assignment. Some should be done as the material is learned and the rest can be left for exam preparation.

Warm-up Exercises

1. Let A , B and C be statement variables. Determine the truth table of $(A \wedge B) \implies \neg C$.
2. State the contrapositive and the converse of the following implication: If Jane is a doctor, then she went to medical school.

Recommended Problems

3. For each of the following statements, identify the four parts of the quantified statement (quantifier, variables, domain, and open sentence). Next, express the statement in symbolic form using as few words as possible and then write down the negation of the statement (when possible, without using any negative words such as “not” or the \neg symbol, but negative math symbols like \neq are okay). Finally, determine if the original statement is true or false. No justification is needed.
 - (a) For all real numbers x and y , $x \neq y$ implies that $x^2 + y^2 > 0$.
 - (b) For every even integer a and odd integer b , a rational number c can always be found such that $a < c < b$ or $b < c < a$.
4. Let A and B be statement variables. Prove that $(\neg A) \vee B$ is logically equivalent to $\neg(A \wedge \neg B)$.
5. Let A and B be statement variables. Determine whether $A \implies B$ is logically equivalent to $(\neg A) \vee B$.
6. Assume that it has been established that the following implication is true:

If I don't see my advisor today, then I will see her tomorrow.

For each of the sentences below, determine if it is true or false. No justification is needed. If you can't determine the truth value of the sentence, explain why.
 - (a) I don't meet my advisor both today and tomorrow. (This is arguably an ambiguous English sentence. Answer the problem using both interpretations.)
 - (b) I meet my advisor both today and tomorrow.
 - (c) I meet my advisor either today or tomorrow (but not on both days).
7. Let A, B and C be statement variables. Prove the following logical equivalence using a chain of logical equivalences as in Chapter 2.3 of the notes.

$$(A \wedge C) \vee (B \wedge C) \equiv \neg((A \vee B) \implies \neg C)$$
