

Model 2 – Random Sampling Method

- a. Sampling is random if either is the probability of selecting a unit is a constant from each of the population.

The probability of selecting a unit is a constant from each of the large population is called random.

- b. Suppose you have a population with five items that are numbered 1 to 5 and you select a sample of 2 items from the population the probability of selecting a unit is a constant from each of the population.

The probability of selecting a unit is a determined by using replacement, such as putting back item in bag, or 1 to 5 after each selection, and then you draw the unit again, so that the probability of selecting a unit will get other thing is that not whether you get and not the same thing again or not.
